

King of App, the CMS to create mobile apps, and is open source

7 days ago Tech Odyssey Apps & Software 0 Comments

King of App is presented as an open source CMS for creating mobile apps, and present their version 2.0 with the hope of turning it into the "wordpress creating apps."

This new version is easier to use and faster. Still allows choose templates to create apps in various categories, but now, being open source, open the door for any programmer to expand the collection of designs available.

The goal is that, in the same way that WordPress can choose from thousands of templates already designed, and make changes to suit our project, King of App we can choose without losing the flexibility and should provide a platform. In addition to templates, developers can create modules and specific functionality using JavaScript, HTML and CSS.

Now we can even choose different templates for IOS and android version of our application, and is prepared to include advertising services and analytics.

Along with this second version, also tell us they have received a second round of funding worth 520,000 euros. They will now work to cross borders and show the world how it is possible to create applications for mobile with our content without having great programming knowledge.
